The following Letters having been the Subject of much Conversation (though they do not relate to American Affairs) are inserted by Desire of several of our Readers.

From the GENTLEMAN's MAGAZINE, for September.

To JUNIUS.

SIR, Clifton, Sept. 14.

HAVING accidentally seen a republication of your letters, wherein you have been pleased to assert that I had sold the companions of my success; I am again obliged to declare the said assertion to be a most infamous and malicious falsehood; and I again call upon you to stand forth, avow yourself, and prove the charge. If you can make it out to the satisfaction of any one man in the kingdom, I will be content to be thought the worst man in it; if you do not, what must the nation think of you? Party has nothing to do in this affair: You have made a personal attack upon my honour, defamed me by a most vile calumny, which might possibly have sunk into oblivion, had not such uncommon pains been taken to renew and perpetuate this scandal, chiefly because it has been told in good language. For I give you full credit for your elegant diction, well turned periods, and attic wit; but wit is oftentimes false, though it may appear brilliant; which is exactly the case of your whole performance. But, Sir, I am obliged in the most serious manner to accuse you of being guilty of falsities. You have said things that are not. To support your story, you have recourse to the following irresistible argument: "You sold the companions of your victory, because when the sixteenth regiment was given to you, you was silent?" The conclusion is inevitable, I believe that such deep and acute reasoning could only come from such an extraordinary writer as Junius. But unfortunately for you, the premises as well as the conclusion are absolutely false. Many applications have been made to the ministry on the subject of the Manilla ransom since the time of my being Colonel of that regiment. As I have for some years quitted London, I was obliged to have recourse to the Honourable Colonel Monson and Sir Samuel Cornish to negotiate for me: In the last autumn I personally delivered a memorial to the Earl of Shelburne at his seat in Wiltshire. As you have told us of your importance, that you are a person of rank and fortune, and above a common bribe, you may in all probability be not unknown to his Lordship, who can satisfy you of the truth of what I say. But I shall now take the liberty, Sir, to seize your battery, and turn it against yourself. If your puerile and tinsel logic could carry the least weight or conviction with it, how must you stand affected by the inevitable conclusion, as you are pleased to term it? According to Junius, silence is guilt. In many of the public papers, you have been called in the most direct and offensive terms, a liar and a coward. When did you reply to these foul accusations? You have been quite silent, quite chop-fallen: Therefore, because you was silent, the nation has a right to pronounce you to be both a liar and a coward from your own argument: But, Sir, I will give you fairer play; will afford you an opportunity to wipe off the first appellation; by desiring the proofs of your charge [illegible] me. Produce them, to wipe your Lion's skin, and the despicable imposture of the old Roman name which you have affected. For the future assume the name of some modern [illegible] and dark assassin: Let your appellation have some affinity to your practice. But if I must perish, Junius, let me perish in the face of day, be for once a generous and open enemy. I allow that Gothic appeals to cold iron are no better proofs of a man's honesty and veracity than hot iron and burning plowshares are of female chastity: But a soldier's honour is as delicate as a woman's; it must not be suspected; you have dared to throw more than a suspicion upon mine: You cannot but know the consequences, which even the meekness of christianity would pardon me for, after the injury you have done me.

WILLIAM DRAPER.

Haret lateri lethalis arundo.

To Sir WILLIAM DRAPER, K. B.

SIR,

AFTER so long an interval, I did not expect to see the debate revived between us. My answer to your last letter shall be short; for I write to you with reluctance, and I hope we shall now conclude our correspondence for ever.

Had you been originally, and without provocation, attacked by an anonymous writer, you would have some right to demand his name. But in this cause you are a volunteer. You engaged in it with the unpremeditated gallantry of a soldier. You were content to see your name in opposition to a man who would probably continue in concealment. You understood the terms upon which we were to correspond, and gave at least a tacit assent to them. After voluntarily attacking me under the character of Junius, what possible right have you to know me under any other? Will you forgive me if I insinuate to you, that you foresaw some honour in the apparent spirit of coming forward in person, and that you were not quite indifferent to the display of your literary qualifications?

You cannot but know, that the re-publication of my letters, was no more than a catch-penny contrivance of a printer, in which it was impossible I should be concerned, and for which I am no way answerable. At the same time I wish you to understand, that if I do not take the trouble to re-printing these papers, it is not from any fear of giving offence to Sir William Draper.

Your remarks upon a signature, adopted merely for distinction, are unworthy of notice; but when you tell me, I have submitted to be called a liar and a coward, I must ask you in my turn, whether you seriously think it any way incumbent upon me to take notice of the silly invectives of every simpleton, who writes in a news-paper; and what opinion you would have conceived of my discretion, if I had suffered myself to be the dupe of so shallow an artifice?

Your appeal to the sword, though consistent enough with your late profession, will neither prove your innocence, nor clear you from suspicion.——Your complaints with regard to the Manilla ransom were, for a considerable time, a distress to government. You were appointed (greatly out of your turn) to the command of a regiment, and during that administration we heard no more of Sir William Draper. The facts of which I speak, may indeed be variously accounted for, but they are too notorious to be denied; and I think you might have learnt at the university, that a false conclusion is an error in argument, not a breach of veracity. Your solicitations I doubt not were renewed under another administration. Admitting the fact, I fear an indifferent person would not infer from it, that experience had made you acquainted with the benefits of complaining. Remember, Sir, that you have yourself confessed, that, considering the critical situation of this country, the ministry are in the right to temporise with Spain.—The confession reduces you to an unfortunate dilemma. By renewing your solicitations, you must either mean to force your country into a war at a most unreasonable juncture; or, having no view or expectation of that kind, that you look for nothing but a private compensation to yourself.

As to me, it is by no means necessary that I should be exposed to the resentment of the worst and the most powerful men in this country, though I may be indifferent about yours. Though YOU would fight, there are others who would assassinate.

But after all, Sir, where is the injury? You assure me that my logic is puerile and tinsel, that it carries not the least weight or conviction, that my premises are false, and my conclusions absurd. If this be a just description of me, how is it possible for such a writer to disturb your peace of mind, or injure a character so well established as yours? Take care, Sir William, how you indulge this unruly temper, lest the world should suspect that conscience has some share in your resentments. You have more to fear from the treachery of your own passions, than from any malevolence of mine.

I believe, Sir, you will never know me. A considerable time must certainly elapse before we are personally acquainted. You need not however regret the delay, or suffer an apprehension that any length of time can restore you to the christian meekness of your temper, and disappoint your present indignation. If I understand your character, there is in your own breast a repository, in which your resentments may be safely laid up for future occasions, and preserved without the hazard of diminution. The Odia in longum jacens quæ reconderet, auctaque promeret, I thought had only belonged to the worst character of antiquity. The text is in Tacitus.——You know best where to look for the commentary.

JUNIUS.

Mr. TIMOTHY,

WHY it should be I know not; but so it is, that the people of this place seem quite insensible of the danger they constantly are exposed to from FIRE, else surely more care would be taken to prevent it; for accidents of this sort, are mostly, if not always, owing to our own negligence, in various ways. One might reasonably think, that prudent men stood in no need of many more instances of the losses that have been sustained by fire, than those we already know, to awaken them to a sense of the risk they run, both with respect to their lives and properties, from that devouring element, when it breaks through those bounds within which it is so useful to us, upon several occasions; for then it becomes an inexorable enemy, from whom no terms of capitulation can be expected. Have we forgotten the dreadful calamity that befel this town in the year 1740, or, the many buildings that have been burnt down since that time, owing wholly to carelessness? Besides many other proofs, that might be given, of the truth of this, I shall only observe, that that one third part of Charles-Town was once consumed, as two houses of Mr. Ellis's have since been, by fire taking among shavings in carpenters and joiners shops; Mr. Elmy's and Mrs. Petrie's stables, and Mr. Harvey's barn, together with some contiguous buildings, were all destroyed, by negroes carrying fire or candles amongst hay. Mr. Mitchell's houses were also burnt by a candle being placed too near oakum, as was his Majesty's ship Prince George, of 90 guns, at sea, with near 700 of its crew, by the like cause. Need we be put in mind of the terrible fires that at two different times laid waste several hundred houses at Boston, and for the greatest part of Bridge-Town in Barbados; and but lately the same misfortune befel the town of St. John in Antigua, to the utter ruin of very many families in these several places? Let us therefore begin to learn wisdom, from a recollection of what hath so repeatedly happened, as well to ourselves as our neighbours, and guard as far as human prudence can direct us, against such accidents for the time to come; for the danger is daily increasing, as the town enlarges in the number of houses and inhabitants, else we may one day be severely scourged for our supineness, in neglecting the necessary means for our own safety. Besides, we ought to reflect, that losses from fire are more likely to happen here, than in most other places, considering, the combustible materials of which our houses are generally built, and the very inflammable nature of some of our exports, such as hemp and naval stores, which are often carelessly put up. Moreover, we have to watch not only against the heedlessness, but also the wicked inclinations of many, who, to the shame of those who permit this, are too much intrusted with fires and candles, at all hours in the night. But it is hoped, that these things will be better seen to for the future; for surely we cannot be too watchful against a foe that gives no quarter when once it is let loose upon us.

I will only ask those, who were so unjustifiably negligent of their own and their neighbours safety, nay of the preservation of all the inhabitants of Charles-Town, what they think would have been the consequence, had a fire spread itself when near 50,000 pounds weight of gunpowder were lodged in the houses and stores of merchants? The answer is ready, that the greatest part, if not the whole, of this town, must have been destroyed, from the materials of houses on fire being driven in all directions, and to great distances, when in a blaze (as happened at Montreal) by the explosion of the gunpowder, as it took fire in one house after another: For who would be so hardy to come near a building which was in flames, if they knew their certain destruction was placed there? In short, had such a misfortune befallen us, when so great a quantity of powder was on hand, hundreds of lives must have been lost; for people always crowd in great numbers to whatever place a fire breaks out in; and if once a misfortune of this sort fell out, no one would dare to approach another place of danger, whilst he could save his life by keeping at a distance; and thus would the flames be left to spread devastation without controul.

I am of the opinion, that if due attention were given to the following particulars, fires would not happen so frequently amongst us, as hitherto they have done: And it will greatly depend on the vigilance of masters of families, to see most of them complied with; for it appears, from the few instances given above, that those losses might all have been prevented, if ever so little care had been taken.

Though the expence of sweeping chimnies be but a mere trifle, yet the frequency of their taking fire plainly shews, that this necessary precaution is scandalously neglected; and therefore, a heavier fine than the present one, should be imposed on defaulters in this way.

Many chimnies in this place are so badly constructed, that a boy cannot go up to sweep them: and as we must be in continual danger from such, they ought to be immediately pulled down, in order to their being rebuilt in a proper manner.

It is common with many people, to raise arches of brick-work over the tops of their chimnies; but these should be removed as soon as possible: For as they obstruct the smoak from passing, they contract a foulness sooner than any other part, and therefore are most in danger of catching fire, from sparks lodging in the soot; and this being kindled, and falling on the shingles, will set the whole in a blaze, if timely assistance be not at hand. Instances of this sort have often happened, and consequently they ought to be guarded against for the future: Not only so, but as sparks cannot pass into the air as they should do, were it not for these arches: They frequently strike against them with some force, and thence drop down on the roof, which will thus be set on fire, as we have lately seen on two different occasions.

No servant should be allowed to go into a stable, or other house where fodder is kept, after dark with candle, were it even in a lanthorn; nor into any place where hemp, oakum, oil, spirits, coals, or other such very inflammable materials are stored.

We are also in great danger of fire from negroes carrying burning lightwood or candles into kitchen lofts, which they commonly thrust behind the rafters, or stick to the shingles; whereby the roofs are frequently burnt through, to the hazard of a whole neighbourhood. This might be prevented, by having all such lofts lathed and plastered, and allowing the servants a cheap flat candlestick, with a bit of candle to light them to bed. Smoaking in bed, should likewise be strictly forbidden.

Particular care ought to be taken in the storing of hemp, oakum, pitch, and other goods that are easily set on fire, which should always be kept in close secure places. Instead of this, such things are commonly put in cellars with open windows; so that it is in the power of any wicked or ill-designing person, to set them on fire by night, whenever he pleases, and without any danger of his being discovered. The same may also be said of hay-lofts, the windows of which are frequently left open.

It is to be wished, that bakers, soap-boilers, and tallowchandlers, were removed to the out-skirts of the town — ting aside the very offensive smell of the two latter emp — their business is often left to negroes, both by day and night. And as these people are known to be careless, of a dirty disposition, and many of them bent on mischief, we run no small danger from having such works carried on in the middle of the town.

As it will answer many good purposes to have our streets lighted, more especially in time of fire, it is to be hoped, that all housekeepers will follow the example which has lately been set them by a few people, in having lamps fixed on the fronts of their houses.

Another thing deserves attention, which is, that joiners, housecarpenters, and coopers, should be obliged to clear their shops, or wherever else they work, of all chips and shavings every evening. Nor should they be allowed to work by candle-light, except on some very particular occasions.

More might be said on this subject, but the foregoing only are mentioned for the present, as they seem to require being immediately remedied.—It is indeed true, that before some of them can be set to rights, a law must be passed, to authorize some persons to free us of all such causes as endanger our safety; and as little time as possible ought to be lost in procuring such a law, for it is evidently necessary that we should obtain it.—In the mean time, whatever of these nuisances come within the cognizance of the commissioners of the streets, or of the fire-masters, there is reason to hope will, without delay, be duly attended to.

Mr. PRINTER,

SINCE it has been my misfortune to be absent in our harbour, a season when it has usually been crowded, and the sudden and alarming fall in the price of rice; it was not possible for me, to avoid reflecting upon our late political proceedings, and that hypocrisy, which too often successfully serves as a cloak, to the machinations of the designing part of society, and enables them, to effect schemes for their own private advantage.

Such speculations led me, to examine the originally declared intention of the public resolutions: this shall be a candid enquiry into their causes and effects, and with me at least, shall be a criterion by which I will judge of the future designs of our patriots. If I find that their original professions and subsequent actions agree, like Cæsar's wife, they not even be suspected; but if they disagree, that spirit of freedom, which roused me to defend my violated liberties, will yet stimulate and animate me to censure their proceedings.

When the resolutions were first entered into, it was publickly avowed by our patriots; that the first six, were designed to promote economy; to encourage our own manufactures, and to prevent the importation of certain manufactures from Great-Britain. The last resolution was intended as a means of carrying the others into execution; by obliging all the importers of those manufactures, to accede to the resolutions, thereby to prevent any of them from being in a capacity to thwart the grand design of non-importation; and that it was not intended to be made to operate against the planters and men out of trade.

In consequence of the resolutions, the merchants have sent home orders to countermand their usual importations, and the non-importation which was designed, hath absolutely taken place. Hence it is reasonable to conclude that the avowed design of the confederators is completed — at least on this side the Atlantic: and, that the end, for which the resolutions were entered into, being attained, the persecuting clause in the resolutions, ought not to be permitted to operate. The General Committee must give me leave to ask them, what benefit the province will receive from the distresses of non-subscribers? what good end can be answered, by their not being allowed to sell their effects? will that cruel measure give unanimity to the resolutions? will it contribute to distress the manufacturers in England, and thereby stimulate them to be clamourous for a repeal of the revenue acts? will it be a means of sending any money to our treasury? or, will it be a means to prevent the importation of the prohibited manufactures? As it cannot answer any of these purposes, where is the policy of distressing individuals? I am no importer of goods, will my distress, in not being able to sell my crop here, and my certain loss on being obliged to export it, constrain me to import a less quantity of goods? A non-importation of certain goods was the only end for which the resolutions were framed, and if no such goods are imported, the apparent design of the resolutions is certainly completed, and this being the case, it is obvious, that the confederators cannot, with the faintest shadow of reason, or the least degree of sound policy or justice, prosecute a measure, which in its nature is not capable of producing any effect, but distress to innocent individuals. — When the shoe pinches, the wearer will complain. — Do such proceedings shew benevolence in the hearts, or wisdom in the heads of our patriots? are rage, fury and wanton persecutions the characteristics of true patriots?

——— tantæne animis cœlestibus iræ?

Away with the name of a patriot; many false prophets have arisen, and have deceived many. 'Tis not because a man is always bellowing, Liberty! Liberty! that he is to be exalted into the rank of patriots! The liberty of acting contrary to public professions, is what our modern patriots aim at, and I produce the two following advertisements as authorities for my assertion. The first was published in the South-Carolina Gazette No. 1783, the second appeared in a subsequent paper No. 1787.

"The general committee give notice, That agreeable to the resolutions entered into by the inhabitants of this province on the 22d of July last, no subscriber can purchase any negroes, or other goods, or merchandize whatever, of or belonging to any resident that has refused or neglected to sign the said resolutions within one month after the date thereof: Of which it is expected all persons concerned, will take due notice."

"Some persons in this town, subscribers to the resolutions entered into by the inhabitants of this province on the 22d day of July last, have, contrary to the true intent and meaning of the said resolutions, sold a parcel of rice, belonging to a non-subscriber: The general committee therefore think it necessary, to publish the first breach of that solemn agreement; and at the same time, to remind every subscriber, That the PURCHASING FROM, or SELLING FOR, non-subscribers, any goods or merchandizes, whatever, will be deemed an infringement of the said agreement, and looked upon as not acting according to the true intent and meaning thereof; and that the names of such violators, in future, will be published."

Can any impartial man read those advertisements without his eyes flashing indignation at the measures? Does the persecuting spirit which appears in those publications, agree with the original professions of our patriots? Have not the committee made therein, an arbitrary and forced explanation of the resolutions, which the words of them cannot admit? Which of the resolutions is it, which prohibits any man from selling American produce, the property of a non-subscriber? Is not such a deviation from, and false construction of the resolutions, a sufficient cause to suspect the committee of other forced explanations, and consequently of a design to change the very nature of the resolutions?

The members of the committee were nominated by the people to execute their laws, to defend their claims, and not to make new laws, and tell men that they were fools, and did not understand plain English. The decemviri of Rome, were COMMITTEEMEN too; they were intrusted with power, and were to be the reformers of the state: But they got drunk with the use of Sovereign authority; they erected a tyranny, and proved SCOURGES to the people. And the seditious tribunes, by gradually assuming new powers, in consequence of their specious and inflammatory harangues, at length became the tools of a popular faction, and assisted to give a mortal wound to the liberties of a great people who had incautiously enabled them to be in a capacity to do it, by winking at their gradual violations of the fundamental principles of their civil constitution.

As a general obedience to the laws and political constitution of a state, gives security to the people, notwithstanding the efforts of a faction; so doth a careful survey of, and attention to, the dykes in Holland, give safety to the adjacent country, against the fury of the boisterous waves. But when, through negligence, the foaming billows are once permitted to make but a small breach in those bulwarks, the impetuous watery mountains, soon bear down all opposition, and with irresistable fury, sweep away the banks; so, histories shew us, that, when the laws are in any degree permitted to be violated with impunity, it is usual for the violators, to proceed from violation to violation, 'till things are thrown into utter confusion; the liberties of the people destroyed, and a galling tyranny erected upon their ruins. To effect which, the manœuvres of the politician, are similar to those of a general in his attack upon a fortress: He begins his operations with an assault upon some trifling outwork; then directs his fire against works of more importance, and at length batters the citadel: So the politician begins his attack upon the constitution, by infringing the liberties of the people; thence he undertakes to effect a change of government, and a total subversion of the [illegible] But let me turn from [illegible]

[illegible] it always gives me a sensible pleasure to congratulate my friends upon the prosperous situation of their affairs; so I cannot omit this fair opportunity to felicitate my fellow-citizens, upon the sudden increase of the wealth of this province. For certainly the public finances must be in the most flourishing condition, or our œconomic public purse-keepers and representatives, would not, in a manner, almost without hesitation, have bestowed the sum of 1500*l.* Sterling, in charity, upon the application of a private gentleman in London. I esteem this liberal grant, as a proof, that the Treasury is in cash to answer all the expences of government for two or three years to come; and during that time, that of course we shall be free from taxes, unless some terrible unforeseen calamity shall have overwhelmed the colony.

My compliments are particularly due, to those of our patriots, who were most active in promoting a measure which so evidently displays our wealth, and the loyalty of their intentions, as I find, that the charitable supply is remitted to defray the bills of a certain club of patriots, at the London tavern; among whom I have heard, that the celebrated, and truly disinterred patriot, Samuel Vaughan, Esq; is a member of no little consequence.

However, for the honour of my country, I wish that some of our patriots had been endowed with a capacity to have originated some of those political measures, of which they have so much approved, as to have adopted as rules to their conduct: And by originating, instead of imitating, to have thereby preserved us from the reproach, of having always remained in a state of inactivity, 'till in the Northern hemisphere, a light appeared, to shew the political course we were to steer.——O imatatores! servum pecus.

ASHLEY-RIVER, Dec. 16, 1769. FREEMAN.

IN Consequence of the foregoing Letter, the Printer of this Paper thinks himself bound, by every Tie of a public or private Nature, to re-publish the following Part of a Paragraph, inserted in a Supplement to his Gazette, No. 1768, dated December the 8*th*, 1769.

"Before the Adjournment of the House [meaning the Honourable Commons House of Assembly of this Province] a "Resolution was entered into, that the Public Treasurer do advance the Sum of Fifteen Hundred Pounds Sterling, to be immediately remitted to Great-Britain, for the Support of the JUST and CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS "of the People of THAT KINGDOM and AMERICA."

He published this as A FACT: He was well warranted in so doing, from the Journals of the House, and otherwise. He never heard that the above Sum was "bestowed, in Charity, "upon the Application of a private Gentleman in London, to "defray the Bills of a certain Club of Patriots, at the London "Tavern:" And he now submits it to the Public, whether FREEMAN or HIMSELF has adhered to the Truth.

The Printer is likewise very sorry, to be reduced to the cruel Necessity, of laying a Restraint upon his Press, or publishing a Paper which reflects upon the Capacities of Gentlemen who stand fair in the Judgment of the Public. And he hopes that the following short Story (which was told him by a Friend, upon a similar Occasion) will prevent his incurring the least Displeasure. "One cold chilly "Morning, the surly unsocial Diogenes, seeing Plato, with some "of his Scholars, warmly clad, walking upon the Banks of a "River, stripped himself and leaped into it, in order to shew his "Contempt of their Indulgences. The wise Philosopher, turning to his Pupils, said, Take no Notice of that singular proud "Wretch, and he will be glad to sneak out again."

New Advertisements,

WHEREAS the Committee of this Town, has caused to be published, in this and Charles Crouch's Gazette, That I "was a transient Person, and desires no Subscriber to "buy any Goods from me, except Coals and Salt:" In Consequence of which, I think it necessary to inform the Public, that I have lived thirteen Months in Carolina, and that I came with a Design to settle in Charles-Town sixteen Months ago, and only went Home in Spring on Account of my Health; humbly requesting, that it may be taken into Consideration by the Subscribers, how far I may be deemed a Resident or a Subscriber. I offered to sign the Resolutions, but could not be admitted. I understand Two-thirds of the said Committee were of Opinion, that my Case was clear and laudable; what the Reasons of the other One-third might be, every Freeman has Liberty to judge. By the foregoing Proceedings, I think myself injured, the Aim being to hurt my Trade amongst you: But as a Friend to the Country, would recommend it in general Terms, to keep your Hands clean of Oppression; for if you use it in Proportion to your Power, the World will think you but nominal or selfish Freemen.

Dec. 28, 1769. JOHN M'DONNELL.

CHARLES-TOWN, DECEMBER 28.

THE intended General Meeting of the Inhabitants who ſigned the Reſolutions of the 22d of July laſt, at Liberty-Tree, is at a greater Diſtance than was reported laſt Week.—No Day has been appointed for ſuch Meeting: When there is, previous public Notice will be given thereof.

In the General Gazette of the 25th Inſtant, publiſhed by Mr. Robert Wells, from GLASGOW, we are told, that "the Quantity of Rice entered for Exportation from this Port at laſt Chriſtmas, was 22,203 Barrels, and this Year [only] 14,117;" that "the Indico then exported was 47,439 lb and [only] 23,881 lb this Year." We will not, at preſent, preſume to enter into the Deſign of this, any more than of many other curious Publications in that Paper, ſince the Repeal of the Stamp-Act; but, leſt it ſhould be ſuppoſed, that the very obſervable Difference in Quantity of the Exports of thoſe two Articles, is attributable either to the Influence of the Times, or a ſhort Crop, it is neceſſary to give the Reader this further Information, viz. that though the Exports, as ſtated by Mr. Wells, are juſt, yet the Difference is in no wiſe owing to any of the Cauſes above-mentioned, but to a late Crop, and the later Arrival of Veſſels: That there is now actually ſhipped, and may be cleared out in a Week, a Quantity of RICE, at leaſt equal to laſt Year's: And that the Ship in which William-Henry Drayton, Eſq; embarks for England, now ready to clear out, has on board near 140,000 lb of INDICO.

There are now no leſs than 94 Sail of Sea Veſſels in this Port, viz. 1 Man of War, 1 Spaniſh Polacre, 32 Ships, 4 Snows, 23 Brigantines, 15 Scooners, and 18 Sloops; beſides about 40 coaſting Scooners——A Number ſeldom exceeded at this Time of the Year.

The Planters of Winyah complain, that when we informed our Readers, in this Paper No. 1784, that "a Parcel of Rice, belonging to a Non-Subſcriber, had been ſent from George-Town to Charles-Town for Sale," it created a Suppoſition as groundleſs as it was injurious, viz. that "ſome, one at leaſt, of the Planters of Winyah, had ſhewn his Diſapprobation of, or a Diſpoſition to counteract, the Meaſures now generally adopted, for procuring a Redreſs of Grievances;" obſerving, that it might have been prevented, by our adding to that Paragraph, that "the Rice there mentioned, was the Property of an Officer of his Majeſty's Cuſtoms." They add, that "the Planters there, have too juſt a Senſe of the Value of Liberty, to deſerve ſuch an oblique Cenſure; that they are ſorry that any of the Name ſhould: But that, if the latter can neither be raiſed by their own Feelings, or the Cries of their Country; if the truly glorious Example ſet them by the Merchants, cannot awake them from the Lethargy into which ſome Time-ſerving Men, have lulled them; they muſt be left to be roured by the Puniſhment juſtly inflicted on them, by ſeperating them from their Society, in the Manner that the patriotic Merchants have done, in which political Excommunication, the Merchants will ever have the beſt Support in the Power of the Planters, who think they have, with the utmoſt Propriety, cut off thoſe diſeaſed Members."

Extract from the North-Briton, of September 30.

"Has not the Honour of Knighthood been conferred upon that TRAITOR to his Country, that Diſgrace to all good Government, Sir Francis Bernard, Gov. of Maſſachuſett's-Bay, who has had a principal Hand in alienating the Affections of the Coloniſts from their Mother Country, and who, by his Ignorance, his Obſtinacy, and his Cruelty, has excited ſuch a Flame in America, as though it may be allayed, can never be extinguiſhed."

Extract of a Letter from London, dated October 3.

"We are aſſured from good Authority, that, in Caſe a certain black-ſiding patriotic Merchant is proceeded againſt at Law, he has drawn up a full and ſatisfactory Vindication of himſelf, which contains ſome Charges againſt a Perſon of great Rank, reſpecting that Negotiation, that, when known, will excite the Admiration of the Public."

The aſſembly of New-York have concurred with, and adopted the reſolutions of the 16th of May laſt, of the houſe of burgeſſes of Virginia.

New-York and Boſton, are making ſtrict inquiries, regarding the legality of the fees that have been for many years demanded and taken by the officers of his majeſty's cuſtoms.

Captain King, who arrived here laſt Thurſday from Antigua, informs us, that about two Hours before he left that Place, Mr. Hall, Mate, and ſome of the Crew of the Ship Cygnet, of and for this Port from London, James Smith, Maſter, arrived there in the Long-Boat, and gave an Account of that Ship having foundered at Sea, in Lat. 24 Long. 54, and that the Maſter and the Reſt of the Crew went on board a Dutch Ship, which they met with, bound to Amſterdam, about the 26th of laſt Month.

On Tueſday laſt arrived here the Diligence temporary Packet-Boat, commanded by Captain Arthur Clark, with the Mails from Jamaica and Penſacola. We hear, that the new Brigantine building for this Service, by Meſſrs. Manſon and Begbie, is, according to Contract, to be launched next Month.

A large Ship, for the London Trade, to be commanded by Captain Richard Maitland, is put upon the Stocks at Hobcaw; and another building, and in great Forwardneſs, at Port-Royal, deſigned for the Briſtol Trade.

The Ship Good-Intent, Captain Longſtaff, from Cowes for Cape-Fear, is put in here by contrary Winds.

Yeſterday 35 Paſſengers from the North of Ireland, arrived here from Georgia, to ſettle in this Province. They came out with that Intent in the Ship Hopewell, Captain Aſhe, arrived at Savannah.

At the cloſing of the Poll on the 20th Inſtant, for electing a Member to repreſent the Pariſh of St. Bartholomew in the preſent General Aſſembly, in the Room of James Reid, Eſq; deceaſed, Iſaac Hayne, Eſq; was declared duly elected.

BOSTON, NOVEMBER 30.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in a public character in England, received by one of the laſt veſſels.

"The remonſtrance againſt governor Barnard was a diſagreeable thing to the miniſtry, and therefore was received with coldneſs, like the petition of the livery of London.—I ſee your oppreſſion ſtill goes on, which when the parliament meets we muſt endeavour to get removed; tho' there muſt ſome ſpirit in oppoſing oppreſſive meaſures, yet a ſteady even oppoſition, is better than a raſh furious one. The miniſtry have no encouragement to continue the officers with you, as the duties do not pay the charge, and I believe they ſee the inexpediency of the ſcheme. Almoſt all our nobility and gentry are out of town, even Lord Hillſborough is in Ireland, but expected to return ſoon. Fear our friends will not be in London 'till juſt before the parliament meets. I ſhall neglect no opportunity to fruſtrate the deſigns of governor Bernard, and promote a good underſtanding between this country and America, which are inſeparable. A ſpirit of diſcontent rather increaſes than ſubſides, throughout the kingdom; and one article of complaint pretty univerſally adopted, is AMERICAN GRIEVANCES."

Extract of a letter from another gentleman of a public character from this continent, reſident in England, dated London, September 29, 1769.

"It gives me great pleaſure, to hear that our people are ſteady in their reſolutions of non importation, and in the promotion of induſtry among themſelves. They will ſoon be ſenſible of the benefit of ſuch conduct, tho' the acts ſhould never be repealed to their full ſatisfaction. For their earth and their ſea, the true ſources of wealth and plenty, will go on producing; and if they receive the annual increaſe, and do not waſte it as heretofore in the gewgaws of this country, but employ their ſpare time in manufacturing for themſelves, they muſt ſoon be out of debt, they muſt ſoon be eaſy and comfortable in their circumſtances, and even wealthy.—I have been told, that in ſome of our country courts heretofore, there were every quarter ſeveral hundred actions of debt, in which the people were ſued by ſhop-keepers, for money due for Britiſh goods (as they are called, but in fact evils). What a loſs of time this muſt occaſion to the people, beſides the expence! and how can Freemen bear the thought, of being deprived of their perſonal liberty, at the caprice of every petty trader, for the paltry vanity of tricking out himſelf and family in the flimſy manufactures of Britain, when they might, by their own induſtry and ingenuity, appear in good ſubſtantial honourable Homeſpun! Could our folks but ſee, what numbers of merchants, and even ſhop-keepers, here, make great eſtates, by American folly; how many ſhops of A,B,C, & comp. with wares for exportation to the coloniſts, maintain, each ſhop, three or four partners and their families, every one with his country-houſe and equipage, where they live like princes on the ſweat of our brows; pretending indeed, ſometimes, to wiſh well to our privileges, but on the preſent important occaſion few of them affording us any aſſiſtance? I am perſuaded, that indignation would ſupply our want of prudence; we ſhould diſdain the thraldom we have ſo long been held in by this miſchievous commerce, reject it for ever, and ſeek our reſources where God and nature have placed them, WITHIN OURSELVES.

"Your Merchants on the other hand, have ſhown a noble diſintereſtedneſs and love to their country, unexampled amongſt traders in any age or country, and which does them infinite honour all over Europe. The corrupted part indeed of this people here, can ſcarce believe ſuch virtue poſſible, but perſeverance will convince them, that there is ſtill in the world ſuch a thing as public ſpirit.—I hope that, if the oppreſſive acts are not repealed this winter, your ſtocks that uſed to be employed in the Britiſh trade, will be turned to the employment of manufacturers among yourſelves—for, notwithſtanding the former general opinion that manufactures were impracticable in America, on account of the dearneſs of labour, experience ſhews, in the manufactures of paper and ſtockings in Pennſylvania, and of womens ſhoes at Lynn in your province, that labour is dear only from the want of conſtant employment; (he who is often out of work requiring neceſſarily as much for the time he does work, as will maintain him when he does not work); and that where we do not interrupt that employment by importations, the cheapneſs of our proviſions gives us ſuch advantage over the manufacturers in Britain, that (eſpecially in bulky goods, whoſe freight would be conſiderable) we may always underwork them."

MILES BREWTON, WILLIAM BURROWS,
DANIEL DOYLEY, DAVID DEAS,
CHARLES PINCKNEY, DANIEL CANNON,
WILLIAM LOGAN, WILLIAM GIBBES.

The Subſcriber hath for SALE,

ABOUT 15,000 Acres of exceeding good LAND, lying on Santee, and Ediſto-Rivers, and the Waters thereof, and between 50 and 100 Miles from Charles-Town, in Tracts of any Size, from 100 to 3000 Acres, ſeveral of which lie on both Sides of the ſaid Rivers, have very large Fronts, and good Proportions of Swamp and high Land.

The Land, in general, is as good for Corn, Indico, Hemp or Rice, as any in the Province.

One of the Tracts conſiſts of about 2500 Acres, and is a moſt commodious Place for a Saw-Mill to work three Saws, having a good Creek running through it, upon which a Mill may very conveniently be built as near as is proper to the main Santee-River: Beſides the Mill-Seat on ſaid Tract, which abounds with good Pine and Cypreſs Timber contiguous, there is ſo much good River Swamp, as to render it a moſt complete Hemp or Indico Plantation.

Sundry other ſmall Tracts on the ſaid Rivers, as well as Inland Tracts of one, two, to 500 Acres, are very commodious for ſmall Settlements.

All the Land is exceeding well watered, and the only Fault that can be found with any, is, that it is not convenient to any but freſh-Water Landings, which renders it rather fitter for the Culture of Hemp and Indico than Rice; and indeed moſt of the Swamp is rather of the Quality that ſuits the two former beſt.

The Owner of ſaid Lands, among ſuch a Variety, doth not doubt, but he ſhall be able to furniſh any Perſon inclinable to purchaſe, in thoſe Parts of the Province where they lie, at what they may think a reaſonable Rate. JOHN MITCHELL.

To be LET,

TWENTY ACRES, or thereabouts, of LAND, adjoining Mr. DANIEL CANNON's up the PATH, very fit for Paſturage. Enquire of the Printer.

WILLIAM LOGAN, WILLIAM GIBBES.

The Subſcriber hath for SALE,

ABOUT 15,000 Acres of exceeding good LAND, lying on Santee, and Ediſto-Rivers, and the Waters thereof, and between 50 and 100 Miles from Charles-Town, in Tracts of any Size, from 100 to 3000 Acres, ſeveral of which lie on both Sides of the ſaid Rivers, have very large Fronts, and good Proportions of Swamp and high Land.

The Land, in general, is as good for Corn, Indico, Hemp, or Rice, as any in the Province.

One of the Tracts conſiſts of about 2500 Acres, and is a moſt commodious Place for a Saw-Mill to work three Saws, having a good Creek running through it, upon which a Mill may very conveniently be built as near as is proper to the main Santee-River: Beſides the Mill-Seat on ſaid Tract, which abounds with good Pine and Cypreſs Timber contiguous, there is ſo much good River Swamp, as to render it a moſt complete Hemp or Indico Plantation.

Sundry other ſmall Tracts on the ſaid Rivers, as well as Inland Tracts of one, two, to 500 Acres, are very commodious for ſmall Settlements.

All the Land is exceeding well watered, and the only Fault that can be found with any, is, that it is not convenient to any but freſh-Water Landings, which renders it rather fitter for the Culture of Hemp and Indico than Rice; and indeed moſt of the Swamp is rather of the Quality that ſuits the two former beſt.

The Owner of ſaid Lands, among ſuch a Variety, doth not doubt, but he ſhall be able to furniſh any Perſon inclinable to purchaſe, in thoſe Parts of the Province where they lie, at what they may think a reaſonable Rate. JOHN MITCHELL.

To be LET,

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1769.

A WORD at parting to JUNIUS.

SIR, Clifton, Oct. 2.

AS you have not favoured me with either of the explanations demanded of you, I can have nothing more to say to you upon my own account. Your mercy to me, or tenderneſs for yourſelf, has been very great. The public will judge of your motives. If your exceſs of modeſty forbids you to produce either the proofs, or yourſelf, I will excuſe it. Take courage; I have not the temper of Tiberius, any more than the rank or power. You, indeed, are a tyrant of another ſort, and upon your political bed of torture can excruciate any ſubject, from a firſt Miniſter down to ſuch a grub or butterfly as myſelf: Like another deteſted tyrant of antiquity, can make the wretched ſufferer fit the bed, if the bed will not fit the ſufferer, by diſjointing or tearing the trembling limbs until they are ſtretched to it's extremity. But courage, conſtancy and patience, under torments, have ſometimes cauſed the moſt hardened monſters to relent, and forgive the object of their cruelty. You, Sir, are determined to try all that human nature can endure, until ſhe expires: Elſe, was it poſſible that you could be the author of that moſt inhuman letter to the Duke of B——d?—I have read, with aſtoniſhment and horror; where, Sir, where were the feelings of your own heart, when you could upbraid a moſt affectionate father with the loſs of his only and moſt amiable ſon? Read over again thoſe cruel lines of yours, and let them wring your very ſoul! Cannot political queſtions be diſcuſſed without deſcending to the moſt odious perſonalities? Muſt you go wantonly out of your way to torment declining age, becauſe the Duke of B——d may have quarrelled with thoſe whoſe cauſe and politics you eſpouſe? For ſhame! for ſhame! As you have ſpoke daggers to him, you may juſtly dread the uſe of them againſt your own breaſt, did a want of courage, or of noble ſentiments, ſtimulate him to ſuch mean revenge. He is above it; he is brave. Do you fancy that your own baſe arts have infected our whole iſland? But your own reflections, your own conſcience, muſt and will, if you have any ſpark of humanity remaining, give him moſt ample vengeance. Not all the power of words with which you are ſo graced, will ever waſh out, or even palliate, this foul blot in your character. I have not time at preſent, to diſſect your letter ſo minutely as I could wiſh, but I will be bold enough to ſay, that it is (as to reaſon and argument) the moſt extraordinary piece of florid impotence that was ever impoſed upon the eyes and ears of the too credulous and deluded mob. It accuſes the Duke of B——d of high treaſon. Upon what foundation? You tell us "that the Duke's pecuniary character makes it more than probable, that he could not have made ſuch ſacrifices at the peace, without ſome private compenſations; that his conduct carried with it an interior evidence, beyond all the legal proofs of a court of juſtice."

My academical education, Sir, bids me tell you that it is neceſſary to eſtabliſh the truth of your firſt propoſition, before you preſume to draw inferences from it. Firſt prove the avarice, before you make the raſh, haſty, and moſt wicked concluſion. This father, Junius, whom you call avaricious, allowed that ſon eight thouſand pounds a year. Upon his moſt unfortunate death, which your uſual good nature took care to remind him of, he greatly increaſed the jointure of the afflicted lady, his widow. Is this avarice? Is this doing good by ſtealth? It is upon record.

If exact order, method, and true œconomy as a maſter of a family; if ſplendor and juſt magnificence, without wild waſte and thoughtleſs extravagance, may conſtitute the character of an avaricious man, the Duke is guilty. But for a moment let us admit, that an ambaſſador may love money too much; what proof do you give that he has taken any to betray his country? Is it hearſay; or the evidence of letters, or oculars; or the evidence of thoſe concerned in this black affair? Produce your authors to the public. It is a moſt impudent kind of ſorcery to attempt to blind us with the ſmoke, without convincing us that the fire has exiſted. You firſt brand him with a vice that he is free from, to render him odious and ſuſpected. Suſpicion is the foul weapon with which you make all your chief attacks; with that you ſtab. But ſhall one of the firſt ſubjects of the realm be ruined in his fame; ſhall even his life be in conſtant danger, from a charge built upon ſuch ſandy foundations? Muſt his houſe be beſieged by lawleſs ruffians, his journies impeded, and even the aſylum of an altar be inſecure, from aſſertions ſo baſe and falſe? Potent as he is, the Duke is amenable to juſtice; if guilty puniſhable. The parliament is the high and ſolemn tribunal for matters of ſuch great moment. To that he they ſubmitted. But I hope alſo, that ſome notice will be taken of, and ſome puniſhment inflicted upon, falſe accuſers, eſpecially upon ſuch, Junius, who are wilfully falſe. In any truth I will agree even with Junius; will agree with him that it is highly unbecoming the dignity of peers to tamper with boroughs. Ariſtocracy is as fatal as democracy. Our conſtitution admits of neither. It loves a King, Lords, and Commons, really choſen by the unbought ſuffrages of a free people. But if corruption only ſhifts hands; if the wealthy commoner gives the bribe, inſtead of the potent peer, is the ſtate better ſerved by this exchange? Is the real emancipation of the borough effected, becauſe new parchment bonds may poſſibly ſuperſede the old? To ſay the truth, wherever ſuch practices prevail, they are equally criminal to and deſtructive of our freemen.

The reſt of your declamation is ſcarce worth conſidering, excepting for the elegance of the language. Like Hamlet in the play, you produce two pictures; you tell us, that one is not like the Duke of B——d; then you bring a moſt hideous caricatura, and tell us of the reſemblance; but multum abludit imago.

All your long tedious accounts of the miniſterial quarrels, and the intrigues of the cabinet, are reducible to a few ſhort lines; and to convince you, Sir, that I do not mean to flatter any miniſter, either paſt or preſent, theſe are my thoughts: They ſeem to have acted like lovers, or children; have pouted, quarrelled, cried, kiſſed, and been friends again, as the objects of deſire, the miniſterial rattles, have been put into their hands. But ſuch proceedings are very unworthy of the gravity and dignity of a great nation. We do not want men of abilities; but we have wanted ſteadineſs; we want unanimity: Your letters, Junius, will not contribute thereto. You may one day expire by a flame of your own kindling. But it is my humble opinion, that lenity and moderation, pardon and oblivion, will diſappoint the efforts of all the ſeditious in the land, and extinguiſh their wide ſpreading fires. I have lived with this ſentiment; with this I ſhall die.

LONDON, OCTOBER 14.

IT is well known with what indifference a certain premier D—e has hitherto treated every petition that has been preſented, both in the m—l department, as well as his political converſation; but when he was told of the Yorkſhire petition and the reſpectable names that ſupported it, he exclaimed, "This is no "petition, this is a demand, which I am afraid muſt, at length, "be complied with."

A diſſolution of the preſent parliament is now ſeriouſly talked of by the friends, as well as the enemies, of the adminiſtration.

It is believed, that if a perſon, who now holds a very high office in the law, be diſplaced, more vigorous meaſures will be purſued againſt thoſe who go great lengths in writing, procuring, and preſenting petitions, than of other violent ſteps againſt the adminiſtration; it being imputed to his inſiſting on what is called lenient and moderate meaſures, that ſo great a paſſiveneſs in this point has hitherto prevailed.

Extract of a letter from Dublin, October 16, 1769.

"The fracas which happened between our L—d L——t and Dr. Lucas engages almoſt every part of converſation here; though the doctor is naturally a warm man, yet in this reſpect, it is ſaid, he behaved with becoming temper, and his replies were only ſuch as may be expected from the queſtions, by any man of ſpirit and independence.

"It has already gone ſo far that nothing but the death of either of the parties can prevent it from becoming of the moſt ſerious nature, for when the doctor told him that his elevated ſtation, at preſent, deprived him from taking that ſatisfaction that was due from one gentleman to another; the V—c—y replied, "Sir, as the time is approaching when that diſtinction will ceaſe, I now pledge myſelf to you, that I will then give every ſatisfaction that you may expect from the moſt private gentleman in the kingdom."

A motion will be made the firſt day of term, for a habeas to remove Mr. Wilkes, in order that he may be ſworn in alderman of Farringdon-without.

The m——y are greatly at a loſs for an expedient to move a certain great lawyer, as he remains inflexible with reſpect to his opinion concerning the late Middleſex election.

It is reported, that an expreſs is certainly ſent after a nobleman, lately gone abroad, to bring him back, his aſſiſtance being greatly wanted at the board.

OCTOBER 16.

The Lord Chancellor, we are informed, has abſolutely refuſed to reſign, notwithſtanding the requeſt was accompanied with the offer of a conſiderable penſion.

Meſſrs. Sawbridge and Townſend, the two ſheriffs, were at court yeſterday.

Yeſterday the Lord Chancellor was done at Jonathan's upon the ratio of ſixty to forty guineas, that he reſigns before Chriſtmas; and at night his Lordſhip was done at Arthur's upon the ratio of three to one, that he reſigns before Saturday ſe'nnight.

It is talked among thoſe in the higher ſphere of life, that a change in the miniſtry will certainly ſoon take place, and that it is to be compoſed of the three brothers, the upright Yorkſhireman, and their friends.

It is given out, that in caſe the Lord Chancellor reſigns, the ſeals will be put in commiſſion till Lord Rathfax's trial is over, and that afterwards they will be given to Lord Chief Juſtice Mansfield.

OCTOBER 18.

It is now ſaid that the m——y have fixed their eyes on Mr. De G——y, for the vacancy in the law department, ſhould it happen.

It is ſaid that the reaſon of a certain nobleman's journey, at this time, to foreign parts, is, that from ſome late circumſtances it appears, as if it was the plan of the preſent ſet to give him up, to appeaſe the people's rage.

Yeſterday the Earl of Hillſborough was at court for the firſt time ſince his arrival in town from Ireland: And after breaking up of the levee, had the honour of a conference with his Majeſty.

The expedition of a certain great man in a neighbouring kingdom, we are aſſured, was in order to ſound the country gentlemen with reſpect to their conduct in a great aſſembly the enſuing winter, for which office his L——y is eminently qualified, from his entertaining converſation and convivial ſpirit.—His journey however, it is aſſerted has been to little purpoſe; as a ſtronger oppoſition to m——l meaſures is expected in Dublin this ſeaſon, than has been known for a great number of years.

It is ſaid this morning reported, that, though a great man in the law is very indifferent as to what may be determined relative to his continuing his office, or not, yet he has declared that he will not voluntarily reſign, nor will he trim, but always act as his judgment and conſcience ſhall direct.

Yeſterday morning were entered at the Cuſtom-houſe, forty-five hogſheads of tobacco, ſent as a preſent to John Wilkes, Eſq; from the planters in Maryland.

We hear the above tobacco will produce the ſum of 500 l.

The diſturbances which have lately happened in the iſland of Jerſey are not likely to ſubſide, the inhabitants of that place being determined not to ſuffer any infringement on their natural and inherent rights.

OCTOBER 21.

The report ſtill continues to be current, that the Lord Chancellor will be turned out.—It is certain that the miniſters have been, and are ſtill a good deal embarraſſed about this meaſure.

In caſe of a new parliament, it is ſaid, among other regulations, a commiſſion will be eſtabliſhed to enquire, by oath, into the abuſes of collecting and managing every branch of the public revenue, as well as the civil liſt; to examine into the ſuperannuated and uſeleſs offices, as well as exorbitant ſalaries and unmerited fees; to look into all the bills of the ſeveral ſeſſions about court; to ſearch into the penſions, and the pretences for granting them; and into every part of the expence of the civil liſt, except his Majeſty's privy purſe; and to lay this enquiry before the legiſlature, with their opinion under what heads they conceive there may be a regulation of the expence.

Saturday being the birth-day of Mr. Wilkes, rejoicings will made in several parts of London and Westminster. At night the houses in the principal streets in the city were illuminated, guns were fired in several places, and bonfires lighted: at one of which, on Snow-hill, a certain nobleman was burnt in effigy.

The Black Dog tavern, at Lambeth, was opened on the above occasion, for the friends of Mr. Wilkes, by Sir Joseph Mawbey, and at noon 45 pieces of cannon were discharged before the door.

The same evening the committee of the bill of rights sent, as a present to John Wilkes, Esq; a silver cup of 100*l.* value; it will contain a gallon and half a pint, and is of curious workmanship: On the outside is the figure of John Wilkes, Esq; with the cap of liberty over his head, held by Britannia; before him lies magna charta, and the bill of rights. And throughout the metropolis, a general joy was exhibited, which plainly shews that Mr. Wilkes is not merely the idol of the mob, but a man whose very intrepid public conduct is thought deserving universal applause by the most candid, sensible, and prudent.

NOVEMBER 2.

Samuel Vaughan, Esq; had a present of five hogsheads of tobacco, from Maryland, brought in the same ship, and from the gentlemen who sent Mr. Wilkes the 45 hogsheads; and Mr. Vaughan was desired by letter to pay the duties and other expences of the 45 hogsheads, and deliver them to Mr. Wilkes's order, without any expence whatever.

Mr. Wilkes only entered into the 43d year year of his age last Saturday, not the 45th.

Mr. Rigby is now the fac totum, alias companion and adviser, of his grace the Duke of Grafton, in all his public affairs.

The Right Hon. the Lord Mayor elect, has been pleased to order the following motto to be painted on his coach and banner, Potior Metallis Libertas.

The following is the state of petitioning at present; the undernamed counties, cities, and towns having petitioned, or determined to petition: Middlesex, Surry, Wiltshire, Buckinghamshire, Yorkshire, Gloucestershire, Herefordshire, Devonshire, Somersetshire, Cornwall, Derbyshire, Warwickshire, Lincolnshire, Nottinghamshire, Northumberland, Denbighshire, Essex, Norfolk, London, Westminster, the first which mentioned the dissolution of parliament. Bristol, Liverpoole, Exeter, Oxford, Southwark, Newcastle, &c.

Hampshire, though a government county, seems to have compromised. The freeholders absolutely refused to address, and therefore have not petitioned.

Hertfordshire is silent, to the astonishment of all the kingdom. Kent, it is now said, will petition, notwithstanding the supposed influence of the ministry.

We are informed, that the true reason for the late meeting of the parliament, is to give time for settling the American complaints; which, we hear, will be the first object, and that a late governor will return thither early in the spring, with a douceur that will insure his welcome.

It is now said the p———t will meet before the time lately talked of; as the meeting of the m—y, at which the members in their interest generally assist, to consider of and form the speech, is now in agitation.

After the levee yesterday, there was a very full council. The members sat late, and the conferences were carried on, we hear, with warmth. What the point in dispute was is not yet absolutely known, though many conjectures have been formed respecting it, some of which, it is imagined, have a near alliance to the truth.

NOVEMBER 4.

We are credibly informed that the cause between a great man in the county of Surry, and a patriotic clergyman, will come on in the King's Bench next term.

As soon as a certain nobleman arrives in town, a meeting will be held of the present patriots, and it is said they are determined to exert their whole influence to have the purport of the several petitions already presented immediately granted.

We hear that Friday next is the day fixed for hearing the cause between Lord Halifax and Mr. Wilkes, which is to be before Lord Chief Justice Wilmot, and a special jury of the county of Middlesex.

A person of consequence, just arrived from Dublin, waited on Mr. Wilkes yesterday, and delivered to that gentleman many tokens of approbation of his conduct, from several persons of the first distinction in Ireland; also some letters from Doctor Lucas, the patriotic member for the city of Dublin, who is commonly called the Wilkes of Ireland.

All thoughts of opposing the Lord-Mayor elect have been laid aside ever since a great officer of the law declared in council, that he would not resign the seals, till the public affairs are established upon terms agreeable to the people, and proper steps taken for redress of the grievances they at this time labour under.

It is rumoured that a memorial of a very important nature is preparing to be sent to the court of Madrid.

It is certain, that his grace the Duke of Leinster, the Right Hon. the Earl of Shannon, and the Right Hon. the speaker of the house of commons of Ireland, have unanimously resolved to oppose the intended scheme of augmenting the army in Ireland, during the government of the present Lord Lieutenant. And they will as certainly, in that patriotic design, meet with the support of the Right Hon. Lord Viscount Mountmorris, and every other spirited nobleman and gentleman, who wish to preserve the constitution from the invasion of the military, and prevent an enormous encrease of the power of the crown, which is already too great, by the appointment of a great number of officers.

From the LONDON CHRONICLE, October 21.

To the PRINTER.

SIR,

THE inclosed lines are a literal translation of a Welsh manuscript; as the names, which seem to have formed the alternate rhimes in the original, were scarcely legible, I was obliged to omit several letters belonging to them in the translation.

GWIRBS.

I.

BENEATH this marble stone, now rotting, lies
The body of th' illustrious G——n;
As for his soul (methinks the Devil cries)
For goods receiv'd, that I've a draft on.

II.

Oh ho! (cries Belzebub) if that's your fun,
We'll have a noble game at hussel:
Come, down—each throw—I'll bet you ten to one,
And sweepstakes for the soul of R——l.

III.

Well thrown! Come R-g-y's mine—here On——w goes—
But stay, who's there?—'tis Moloch knocks:
What smell unusual doth offend my nose?
Odso! my old acquaintance F-x.

IV.

What horrid form so scratching this way comes,
That strikes th' infernal circle mute?
Sound up a royal march—beat, beat your drums,
And hail your honour'd patron B—e.

V.

But why that leering eye so oft turn'd back?
What anguish in thy bosom rages?
Is't for thy ——— loft, or empty sack?
Oatmeal and gulls are here your wages.

JANUARY 1, 1770.

IN Days of Yore, when Greece the Sceptre ſway'd,
And all the Nations of the World obey'd;
When Patriots dar'd aſſert the public Cauſe,
And wiſe Philoſophers gave wholeſome Laws;
When uſeful Arts had ſpread their wide Domain,
And Science flouriſh'd in her peaceful Reign;
'Twas Freedom made her Miſtreſs of the Earth;
To Freedom Science ow'd her happy Birth:
Learning and Liberty walk'd Hand in Hand,
'Till haughty Diſpotiſm oppreſs'd the Land:
Then bloody Tyrants quell'd the riſing Flame,
And few by Learning's Aid aſpir'd to Fame.
In mighty Rome, when mighty Rome was free,
The Source of all politer Arts you ſee:
When liſt'ning Crowds on Tully's Diction hung,
See, ſage Philoſophy drops from his Tongue:
When the great Prince of Poets tun'd his Lyre,
To aid his Muſe, Lo! all the Arts conſpire:
Examine candidly thoſe pointed Strains,
Compos'd by Flaccus in the Sabine Plains;
Learning and Senſe diſtinguiſh every Line,
Taſte and Refinement there conſpicuous ſhine:
But when the Sons of Freedom left the State,
And on their Country's Ruins, Knaves grew great;
Then barb'rous Tribes approach'd in direful Swarms,
Then Gothic Darkneſs came with Gothic Arms,
'Twas then the Muſes loſt their glorious Seat;
Then fell bright Science with her much-lov'd Mate.
Whoe'er will read in Hiſt'ry's faithful Page,
The Riſe and Fall of States from Age to Age,
Will find, that Learning ne'er adorn'd that Land,
Rul'd by a Tyrant's uncontroul'd Command.
Ye Friends of Learning, then your Rights aſſert,
Bondage, that Bane of Happineſs, avert;
Tho' titled Favourites ſcreen behind the Throne,
To bring them forth, depends on you alone;
When lawleſs Villains cruſh you from high,
Submiſſion is but baſe Servility.
We owe Obedience to the Powers above,
Yet ſtill our Country claims our warmeſt Love:
By this the worthieſt Heroes are inſpir'd,
By this, I hope, my youthful Muſe is fir'd:
Should you reward my firſt Eſſay with Praiſe,
This feeble Spark may grow into a Blaze:
This ſlender Bud, which juſt begins to ſhoot,
Cheriſh'd by you, may bloſſom into Fruit.
